Syllabus on Modern Jewish History

This is an upper-division course that will treat European Jewish history chronologically from the Jewish emancipation of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries through and beyond the Holocaust. The bulk of the work for this class will involve in-class analyses of primary sources and consideration of the main questions that historians ask about European Jewry in the modern era:

How did Jews attempt to find their way in various European states during specific historical moments? How did antisemitism affect their experiences? How did Jews try to resolve the tensions between assimilation and the preservation of their traditions? Requirements include weekly comments on the readings, written summaries of recent secondary sources, a midterm, a quiz, and a final exam.

Requirements:
Conduct, attendance, and participation (10 points)
Students are expected to attend every class, to arrive on time, to come prepared in terms of the reading and writing assignments, and to participate in class discussions. If students use mobile devices in class, they are expected to use them only for taking notes or viewing materials for the course that are posted on Sakai. There are no excused absences. Courtesy dictates that students who cannot attend a scheduled class should let me know via email or voicemail prior to that class.

Written comments on each week's assigned reading in the text (10 points)
At the beginning of each unit (specific dates are marked on the syllabus), students are to bring to that day's class a double-spaced and typewritten paper that (1) puts something particularly striking from the assigned chapter in Gartner in their own words with page references inside parentheses; (2) contains a brief comment on the issue at hand; and (3) asks one specific question about a relevant historical problem from the chapter. Each short paper that adheres to all the guidelines will receive one full point. If students are absent, I will accept their papers, so long as the comments arrive prior to the start of that day's class. There are 13 opportunities to earn these points, i.e., students may earn additional credit by writing more than 10 comments.

Written summaries of each week's assigned secondary source (40 points)
One peer-reviewed secondary source is part of each week's required reading. On the dates marked in the syllabus, students will show their familiarity with that week's assigned essay by turning in via Sakai Assignments a two-three-page essay that (1) places the author's main argument in their own words; (2) comments on the main primary sources used by the author; and (3) steps back from the article in order to put it in perspective with regard to issues of Jewish history. Only essays submitted as attachments via Sakai Assignments prior to the class on which they are due will count. Students can earn up to 4 points for each paper. Detailed instructions for this paper are posted on Sakai. There are 12 opportunities to turn in these papers: I will count the 10 highest grades.

Midterm examination (10 points)
Quiz on Jacobson (10 points)
Final examination (10 points)

When you complete this course you will have learned:
The basic contours of modern Jewish history
How religious and modern antisemitism affected the Jewish historical experience
Origins of the state of Israel
