To graduate with a major in History, students must complete 33 credits (or 11 x 3-credit courses) of History classes.

One of these courses must be the required core course for the major, Perspectives on History (50:509:299), which History majors should take as soon as they can. Perspectives will teach history majors the following skills: 1. how to analyze primary sources; 2. how to read secondary sources in a critical manner; 3. how to cite sources properly; 4. how to write to the expectations of the discipline of history; 5. how to construct a historical argument; 6. how to evaluate the integrity, reliability, and usefulness of disparate sources; and 7. how to conduct independent research.

For the remaining 30 credits besides Perspectives, History majors must meet several requirements: 1. 18 of these credits must be from courses taken at Rutgers; 2. 18 of these credits must be from 300- or 400-level courses; 3. A maximum of 12 credits may be from 100- and 200-level courses, but no more than 6 credits can be counted from Western Civilization I and II (510:101 and 510:102) and Development of the United States I and II (512:201 and 512:202); 4. At least 3 credits must be from each of the three geographical areas: 510 (European), 512 (U.S.), and 516 (African, Asian, Latin American, and comparative history); 5. No more than nine credits will be accepted for the major from online courses, of which six credits may be at the 100-200 level, and 3 credits may be at the 300-400 level. (This policy will not apply to students who declared the History major before fall 2016.)

Grades lower than C do not count toward fulfillment of the History major requirement.

History internships and courses offered in the university’s Honors College may also count toward the major, with the department chair’s permission.

If students wish, they may take more than 33 credits of History courses. Students who would like to immerse themselves in reading and research should consider finding a faculty member to supervise their work in the department’s honors course in History (509:495), to be taken in addition to the 33 credits demanded of the major.

Those students seeking certification in teaching should be aware that a requirement is to take a course from a selection dealing with human and intercultural relations. Several history courses may be counted for this purpose and for the History major.

Students should feel free to drop in and visit us in our offices at 429 Cooper Street. The History Department Chair is Dr. Lorrin Thomas, 856-225-2656, the Undergraduate Program Coordinator is Dr. Kate Epstein, 856-225-2721, and the History Graduate Director is Dr. Andrew Shankman, 856-225-6477. They will gladly answer questions about our classes, about majoring in History, and about transferring credit for History courses taken at other schools. Students are also welcome to consult with a faculty member of their choice for History advising.
Introducing…

History Concentrations

Optional History concentrations for both History majors and History minors

- Concentrations are available to all current and future majors/minors
- Choose any one of 16 thematic and geographic tracks (see lists below) as your concentration within the major
- Complete any 5 courses in any concentration by the time you graduate
- These 5 courses count toward your major or minor -- no extra courses required!
- Concentrations can be declared or changed at any time
- Concentrations can be put on resumes and job applications
- Concentrations more easily explain your main area of interest to parents, friends, or employers
- Concentrations are always optional -- you can still opt for no concentration and complete a general History major or minor

Available History Concentrations
(see pages 10-12 of this Course Guide for a list of spring 2019 courses and the concentrations they fulfill)

This course will focus on the myth of Joan of Arc from the middle Ages to the present. Students will analyze primary source materials, including her trial and retrial transcripts with a particular focus on her interrogation and confession. Students will consider whether these trials produced truth or alternative meanings and will determine how authority is both challenged and reasserted. Further, the class will examine representations of Joan of Arc using primary and secondary sources produced after her trial to question how she has been reinterpreted through the ages and used as a national, political, and religious symbol. Through the examination of Joan of Arc, students will sharpen their research and writing skills and learn how historians interpret and write history.

Get your hands on history: This is an individualized opportunity to gain knowledge of local and regional history while contributing to a public history project based at the Mid-Atlantic Regional Center for the Humanities (MARCH) at Rutgers-Camden. The options include historic house research and curatorship for the Cooper Street Historic District and research and digital publishing for The Encyclopedia of Greater Philadelphia. In addition to readings in local and regional history, students will be provided with training and ongoing supervision and feedback while working approximately six hours per week on-site on their selected projects. This course is by arrangement, with permission of the instructor, and is open to juniors and seniors with a GPA of 3.0 and above as well as Honors Program sophomores. Interested students please contact Dr. Charlene Mires, cmires@camden.rutgers.edu.

GEN ED: Experiential Learning (XPL)
This course explores the development of modern politics, society, and culture in Europe and beyond from the mid-eighteenth century to the present. With such a vast time span under consideration, this course is not intended to be an exhaustive survey of modern European history. Rather, we will use a combination of lectures and primary texts as points of entry into the major historical events and trends of the era—the Enlightenment, the rise of capitalism, the French Revolution, industrialization, nationalism, imperialism, the World Wars, and decolonization. Coursework includes lecture, discussion, brief homework assignments, short papers, a mid-term and a final exam.

GEN ED: Global Communities (GCM)

IMPERIALISM
50:510:265:01
M/W 3:45 pm - 5:05 pm
Professor Marker

From iconic children’s tales like Tarzan and German-style beer made in China to English-speaking call centers outsourced to India, the residues of European imperialism are all around us. This course explores the political, economic, and cultural dimensions of European imperial expansion and colonial rule from the mid-nineteenth century to the 1960s. Using narrative histories, historical documents, fiction, and film, we will consider imperialism’s impact on Europeans and European society; African, Indian, and East Asian experiences and critiques of colonial and imperial power; the forces that ultimately led to the collapse of European empires; and the afterlives of imperialism in our globalized world.

GEN ED: Heritages and Civilizations (HAC)
Suffering, illness, and death are experiences universal to all of humanity. How we address these constants varies across time and cultures. This course surveys changes in western attitudes towards the body and care for the sick from antiquity to the present. It gives particular focus to the development of those institutions that dominate health care in twentieth century Europe and the United States. It is designed for students with either an interest in the fields of health care and medicine or the history of science. As success depends more on your ability to think critically about historical questions and arguments, rather than rote memorization, it is open to all students and requires no previous knowledge of the topic.

This course examines European representations of Asia, Africa, the Middle East, and the Americas from the Middle Ages to the early eighteenth century. It traces European portrayals of foreigners in travel writings, descriptions of diplomatic visits, and various art forms. We will discuss European criticism of foreign customs and politics and investigate Europe’s fascination with the exotic, which often resulted in imitation and adoption of foreign habits and luxury goods. We will explore how Europeans imagined and reimagined distant countries and used them as models for comparison.

This course explores religion in ancient Greece through the people, places, and practices associated with it in the literature, art, and archaeology of the Late Bronze Age through Classical periods (ca. 1500-323 BCE). Students gain a background in the historical and social context of religion in the ancient Greek world, and develop an understanding of the sources and methods for religious rituals and beliefs. Students analyze and interpret primary source evidence for Greek religion, including ancient texts and material culture. Topics include origin myths, hero cult, funerary rites, animal sacrifice, oracles, mystery cults, ecstatic worship, witches, and necromancy.
DEVELOPMENT OF THE UNITED STATES I
50:512:201:01
M/W 9:35 am - 10:55 am
Professor Martin

This course traces the path of American history from before European colonization through the colonial period, the Imperial Crisis, Revolution, Civil War, and Reconstruction. We will examine the most important political, economic, social, and cultural developments of the 17th – 19th centuries, and observe how different groups of people shaped and were affected by such developments. Learning about the past involves a careful effort to understand the ideas and beliefs that motivated people to act in certain specific ways, within particular historical circumstances. Development of the U.S. I is an introductory course, intended to acquaint students with various ideas, events, and people from this particular segment of America’s past, and to introduce students to some of the questions and debates that animate the study of early American history.

GEN ED: US in the World (USW)

DEVELOPMENT OF THE UNITED STATES II
50:512:202:01
T/TH 11:10 am - 12:30 pm
Professor Demirjian

This course examines the political, economic, social, and military history of the United States from the 1860s through the 1970s. The course will also examine the roles played by ethnicity, race, gender, class, the development of a national market economy, and the emergence of a powerful national state in shaping ideas about American identity and its place in the world.

GEN ED: US in the World (USW)

AFRICAN-AMERICAN HISTORY II
50:512:204:01
M/W 12:30 pm - 1:50 pm
Professor Glasker

This course covers the history of Black or African American people in the United States from the Civil War to the present. Emphasis is given to the philosophies of W.E.B. Du Bois, Booker T. Washington, Marcus Garvey and Malcolm X, and to the black freedom struggle (civil rights movement). The course also examines the growing class divide between the college educated, suburbanized, white-collar black middle class and the one-fourth of black people who live in poverty and are trapped in inner city ghettos.

GEN ED: US in the World (USW)
AMERICA IN THE AGE OF WORLD WARS
50:512:330:01
M/W 2:05 pm - 3:25 pm
Professor Glasker

AMERICA IN THE AGE OF THE WORLD WARS will examine US history from 1912 to 1945. The course will begin with the election of 1912 and the Progressive Era. We will explore World War I, and proceed through the 1920s, the Harlem Renaissance, the Great Depression, the New Deal, and World War II. The course will be a mix of domestic and foreign affairs, and will include US involvement in the World Wars. The course will also explore the role of African Americans and women in this time period. In addition to exams, students will complete a research paper.

SPECIAL TOPICS IN AMERICAN HISTORY: Fake News
50:512:380:01
T/TH 9:35 am - 10:55 am
Professor Woloson

Claims of "fake news" have become increasingly common in the internet era. While today we have easy access to unprecedented kinds of information that enable us to fact-check stories in almost real time, it is also a reality that news stories – both real and fake – can spread faster and more widely than ever before. But while the circulation of fake news might seem like a phenomenon unique to our time, it actually has a much longer history.

This course focuses on various kinds of false information circulated in America over time: hoaxes, conspiracy theories, advertising puffery, and propaganda. Learning about the much longer histories and broader contexts of fake news is a way to understand not only our current time but how we got here.

The course is divided into two parts. In the first part, we will read a series of historical case studies to see how and why people spread fake news in different eras. We will read of newspaper editors who published stories about humans living on the moon in the 1830s, and of showmen getting rich by selling tickets to see a live mermaid in the 1850s. We will also read about how fake news helped foment excitement for the Revolutionary War, and how propaganda was similarly used to create homefront solidarity during World War I and World War II. The second part of the semester will be devoted to studying the role of fake news in America today, including how it is created and spread, and how it shapes our society. Students will complete a series of short writing assignments in addition to working in small groups on collaborative projects.
LATIN AMERICA II
50:516:212:01
T/TH 9:35 am - 10:55 am
Professor Lombera

The course offers an introduction examination of Latin America’s history, politics, culture, and processes of socioeconomic change through the 19th, 20th, and 21st centuries. We compare the evolution of events along these lines in the different sub-regions and countries, noting where generalizations of the Latin American region are possible and where some sub-regional cases are unique. We start with a discussion of how colonial patterns of domination shaped the socio-economic and political structures of Latin American states after independence, which most countries in the region achieved in the 1820s. Thereafter, two centuries of state formation and development are examined.

The course explores in comparative perspective issues such as class formation, race, gender, national identity, “boom and boost” economic cycles, foreign influences, revolution and counter-revolution, and general social and political change.

GEN ED: Global Communities (GCM)

MODERN JAPAN: From Samurai to Anime
50:516:342:01
M/W 2:05 pm - 3:25 pm
Professor Kapur

This survey course examines the history of Japan from the collapse of the samurai government in the 1850s to the present time. We will examine the “opening” of Japan following centuries of self-imposed isolation, its rise to power and defeat in World War II, and its subsequent transformation into an economic and pop culture powerhouse, as well as more recent events such as the 2011 earthquake, tsunami, and nuclear disaster.

GRADUATE COURSES
READINGS IN EARLY AMERICA TO 1763
56:512:504:01
T 6:00 pm - 8:50 pm
Professor Shankman

This course is an introduction to the primary themes and issues of the English-Speaking Atlantic world of North America in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

RESEARCH COLLOQUIUM IN THE UNITED STATES, 1945 to Present
56:512:512:01
M 6:00 pm - 8:50 pm
Professor Kapur

This graduate course is an intensive collaborative research seminar designed to help students produce an original research paper on the United States and the world since 1945.

RACE AND ETHNICITY IN THE AMERICAS
56:512:524:01
W 6:00 pm - 8:50 pm
Professor Thomas

This course takes a comparative approach to examining the complex history of racial and ethnic difference in the Americas, from the sixteenth through the twenty-first century. Focusing on academic interpretations of race and ethnicity as well as some primary-source texts – so that we experience the language, imagery, and animating questions surrounding race and difference across different eras and regions – we will explore the following themes and problems:

- How “race” and “ethnicity” have operated as social categories throughout the history of the Americas
- How hierarchies of race and ethnicity have shaped historical and political outcomes across the Americas
- How constructions and descriptions of physiological and cultural difference around the Americas have changed over time
- How the experiences of difference defined by physical and cultural markers of descent (“color” and “race,” i.e.) have varied across time, place, and group in the history of the Americas
HISTORY PRACTICUM
56:512:587:01
TH 6:00 pm - 8:50 pm
Professor Mires

This is a seminar in historic interpretation—the art of connecting the public with the meanings of historic places, artifacts, and documents through a variety of techniques and media. Through in-depth reading and group and individual research/interpretation projects, our particular focus will be on interpreting buildings and landscapes within the context of the historical development of American towns, cities, and suburbs. This course fulfills requirements for public history electives, but all students are welcome. A book list will be posted before the semester begins on the professor’s faculty website: https://charlenemires.camden.rutgers.edu/.

ADVANCED TOPICS IN PUBLIC HISTORY: Museums in the Digital Age
56:512:679:01
T 2:00 pm - 4:50 pm
Professor Woloson

Given that we increasingly experience the material world virtually – mediated through the screens of smartphones, tablets, and computers – do museums still matter? If they do, then what roles should they play for individuals and communities? How will museums continue to be relevant in the future?

To help explore these issues, and others, this course places museums in a larger historical context, tracing their roots from personal cabinets of curiosities to larger institutions of edification and entertainment. We will explore the dime and anatomical museums of the 19th century, the development of the "modern" museum in the early 20th century, and the creation of new, virtual museums at the dawn of the 21st century. Among other things, we will discuss the museum as a political and cultural institution, the challenges and opportunities faced by curators, and, of course, the collections themselves, whether on display or hidden in remote storage facilities.

Case studies and site visits will supplement primary and secondary sources. In order to fully appreciate the many issues facing contemporary museums and the challenges of interpretation and curation today, students will also collaborate to create a virtual exhibition of their own.
Supervised work experience in a public history office or private institutional setting, involving project work for one semester or a summer.
